

```

import csv

def read_data():
    """Reads in from a csv and returns the data"""
    try:
        with open(FILENAME, 'r') as csvfile:
            csv_data = csv.reader(csvfile)
            data = [[item1.strip(), item2.strip()]
                    for item1, item2 in csv_data]
            return data
    except IOError:
        print("No such file or directory")
    except Exception as e:
        print("Error:", e)

    return []

def write_data(data):
    """Writes out to a csv"""
    try:
        with open(FILENAME, 'w', newline='') as csvfile: # if you have a PC
            csv_writer = csv.writer(csvfile)
            for row in data:
                if row:
                    csv_writer.writerow(row)
    except IOError:
        print("No such file or directory")
    except Exception as e:
        print("Error:", e)

    print("File saved.")

22.2 Write valid number error checking
Takes a value, returns a positive float or zero
def valid_time(num):
    """Makes sure a value is a number and not negative"""

    try:
        num = float(num)

        if num >= 0:
            return num
    except ValueError:
        print("Workout times must be entered as numbers.")

    print("Workout times must be positive values.")
    return -1

def table_print(headers, data, widths):
    """prints a nested list in a multi-column table format"""

    if len(headers) == len(data[0]) == len(widths):
        nr_columns = len(headers)
    else:
        return

    output = "{:<{}}".format

    # print header row

```

```

for i in range(nr_columns):
    print(output.format(headers[i], widths[i]), end = " ")
print()

print dashes to match width
print("-" * (sum(widths) + nr_columns - 1))

print out data
for row in sorted(data):
    for i in range(nr_columns):
        print(output.format(row[i], widths[i]), end = " ")
    print()

print()

def set_filename(new_name = "test_data.csv"):
    global FILENAME
    FILENAME = new_name

if __name__ == "__main__":
    FILENAME = ""
    set_filename()
    print(FILENAME)

    data = read_data()
    print(data)

    print(valid_time(20))

    table_print(["header1", "header2"], data, 15)

    write_data(data)

```